PART ONE: READING COMPREHENSION (30 MARKS)

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow

Sahra woke up with the rising sun. her hoe was on her shoulders, and she headed for her farm to work on the weeds that were chocking her crops. Her four-acre farm overlooked in Buran Stream and was twenty-five kilometers (25km) away from her home. It was raining heavily the previous three nights. The stream had swelled with torrents of water that flowed above the Buran Bridge. Sahra gripped her hoe and smiled. The rain meant that she would have a good a harvest.

From her farm, Sahra had a clear view of the bridge. She paused to observe the long lines of traffic that had formed on both sides of the bridge. Many people were waiting for the water to subside so that they could safely cross the bridge. Six hours passed and the water of the stream had not subsided. There was unrest and growing impatience among the travellers. They got out of their vehicles and chatted in groups on both sides of the stream.

Suddenly, everyone's attention was drawn to a vehicle that overtook the long line of the traffic, speeding towards the bridge. Sahra stopped weeding. Her eyes widened in disbelief. The vehicle was carrying of women and old men. Sahra dropped her hoe and raced towards the bridge. She got as near the bridge as the floods would allow her, waiting to see what will happen.

"Driver, why can't you wait like everyone else for the water to subside?" she heard someone says, "I am carrying wrappings. We are going for burial on the other side of the stream, several hours drive from here. We are very late and the burial is today. Many people are waiting for us," the driver replied. Sahra moved close to the driver and said to him, "Listen driver! These are dangerous floods. I have witnessed many vehicles being swept away by the floods from this bridge." She said, pointing to her farm that was up a slope, few meters away from the bridge.

"I must brave the floods," said the driver. "We are too late." The driver shook his head, and determined to drive on! Sahra panicked. She had witnessed people die while trying to brave floods. She could not stand back and do nothing. Without thinking, Sahra stood in front of the car, daring the driver to run her over. A crowd began to gather and many of the travellers supported Sahra. The driver was finally persuaded to wait. Later that afternoon, the floods subsided and the traffic on both sides began to flow smoothly.

Four months later, the District Commissioner looked for Sahra. He had good news for her. "You have won a State Award. You have saved the lives of innocent people when you stopped a small vehicle from driving through dangerous floods. You spared the people in the vehicle from being swept away by the floods. You have been awarded the Silver award star. You will receive the award from the president of the state, at the Presidential Palace of Puntland on Thursday evening," he said. This is your invitation to Presidential Palace of Puntland. Sahra was overwhelmed with joy. A simple act had made her win a national award. She had become famous in Puntland State of Somalia.
