PART 1: READING ComprehensionRead the passage below and then answer the questions*(20 marks)*Reading Comprehension

It is the duty of any business owner to try the much he can to attract more customers. How one deals with his customers really count. This is because you can either lose them or maintain them. The letter is good but the former is very expensive. but that question is how can you keep happy the customers you have? On average, eight percent of a business profit comes from twenty percent of its customers.

It is also far less costly to keep a customer than to attract a new one, so you should work on building customer loyalty.

Experts say that it is good to asses your customer expectations after assessing their expectation. Look for ways of exceeding them. If you are unsure, ask some of your customers what it is that appeals them, ask them if there something that you can do to your business to make it even better. You can affectively do this through news letters, reminder cards, or even holiday cards. You can also arrange appreciation lectures to come and lecture your customers, how about organizing dinner at a restaurant for new customers.

In most cases, business owners look at the worst side of their customers. They criticize weak points hence making them detest coming back to the same place. It is always good to maintain optimism towards all the people that you are dealing with. Always have a positive attitude towards them, and they will appreciate you for your goodness. Honestly, gentleness, goodness and humility are just, but some of the many traits we should portray in our daily dealing with people.
